By: Rohan Inampudi, Amish Dara, Abhijit Chebiyam, Anik Patel

Communication:

- Team Meetings:

- We will meet 2 to 3 times a week depending on our workload
- The meetings will last 30 minutes to 1 hour
 - Discuss any problems
 - Update team on progress
 - Collaboratively code and express ideas
- Will create a separate document for meeting notes
 - One team member will be responsible for recording meeting notes during each meeting (different person for every meeting)
- Zoom will be used to hold meetings
- iMessage group chat will be used for communication outside of meetings

- Assistance:

- Our primary form of communication will be done through iMessages, slack, group facetime, zoom, and messenger.
- In the worst case scenario, email can also be used
- You should be able to respond within a couple of hours at latest or a day if an email was sent

- Respect:

- We will have a zero tolerance policy for disrespect and hurtful statements
- We will ensure that we work in a respectful manner to encourage the expression of open ideas
- We will have our own peer evaluation form every work week to make sure that everyone is working. If someone gets a bad score, we will make sure as a group that they engage more and participate in activities

Collaboration:

- Work Distribution:

- Will write pseudocode to break the project down into distributable parts
- Each week we will split up tasks for each person to do before the next meeting
- Using unit testing to test methods and classes before implementation in the project
- Commenting on code by creators to make it easier to understand and troubleshoot for other team members
- Use google calendar to keep track of due dates for parts of the project and testing of classes and functions

- Time Commitment:

- Each group member should expect 2 - 6 hours of work per week
- We will have a shared google calendar to arrange prior commitments
- We will address these time conflicts by avoiding these meeting times and scheduling at a time that works for everyone

- Conflict Resolution:

- We will take a vote on any issue that becomes apparent and which we cannot solve. If it's a tie we'll ask our project mentor to determine what action we should take
- If a certain member is consistently late to meetings or isn't finishing their work on time, we will assess the necessary action to be taken. Ex: Assigning more work to that individual or having them work on extensive documentation for the project
